(3) Hello, everyone. My name is John from Canada. I love nature. My hometown has beautiful nature. When I was a child, I often went to the national park there. Spending time in the park and taking pictures of nature were the most exciting things for me. When I was a college student, I traveled to Alaska. I learned that Alaskan nature is changing because of global warming. It's getting more difficult for polar bears and seals to catch food. I decided to become a photographer to show people the importance of protecting the environment. I have traveled around the world and taken photographs of animals in the wild. Both humans and animals share the beautiful Earth. However, I have realized that only humans destroy nature. I want to show people the dangerous things happening to nature. I believe even one photograph has the power to influence people. To protect the environment, we should learn more about human activities destroying nature. I hope more people will get my message from my photographs.

Questions :

- ① When John was a child, what did he enjoy?
- ② What has John realized as a photographer?
- ③ What does John want to do through his photographs?
